FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

FREERANGE RETURN TO SOUTH STREET WITH A BRAND NEW PRODUCTION

South Street Arts Centre: 2nd - 6th January 2013

“Maybe empathy has a limit. A geography.”

Bea is 19, mischievous, fun-loving and full of life. But she wants to die.

Following ten hugely successful productions across the UK, FreeRange Productions return to South Street Arts Centre in Reading, to celebrate the company's second anniversary, with a strictly limited run of Mick Gordon's uplifting and provocative 'Bea'.

This moving, challenging, and blissfully funny play explores our capacity to understand one another, and questions the true limits of human empathy.

Chris Snow founded FreeRange Productions in Berkshire in 2010, with the aim of giving young people the chance to showcase their skills as part of a professionally managed theatre company. FreeRange are dedicated to the advancement of the individual through the unity and structure of working within a group of like-minded, passionate individuals.

The company is committed to launching the careers of the next generation of practitioners, be they actors, writers or directors. 100% of previous members who have applied for top drama schools have been successful, and some have already gone on to work in the West End or with national television and film companies.

Bea is FreeRange's eleventh production, marking their second anniversary, and follows the company's critically acclaimed season of new work at Edinburgh Fringe Festival in August this year.

“It's such an honour to return to South Street to stage our eleventh show, and to stage it in such a fascinating and innovative way,” says Snow, “This promises to be a truly exciting experience for actors and audiences alike.”
